

Scale Model of Building Presented to Rev. Martin

The generous grant of a 75x142-foot building at 4735 Indianapolis Boulevard, East Chicago, Ind., will enable Saint Joseph's College Calumet Center to expand its facilities, the Rev. Henry J. Martin, C.P.P.S., Director, said recently in announcing acquisition of the building.

Father Martin said the 11,000-square-foot building, housing the Butternut Thrift Store of Interstate Bakeries, will be developed as the Mary Specker Library in memory of the wife of the donor, Mr. Eugene E. Specker, former East Chicago automobile dealer who now resides in Whiting.

Mr. Specker also deeded two 25-foot vacant lots north of the building to the college which is located 100 feet farther north at 4721 Indianapolis Boulevard.

"We at Saint Joseph's College Calumet Center are most appreciative for this generous gift from Mr. Specker and we anxiously await an opportunity to fully develop the building into much needed and greatly desired library facilities. Mr. Specker has certainly given the college inspirational opportunities to meet the college challenge which lies just ahead," Father Martin said.

Announcement of the gift was made immediately after the Society of the Precious Blood had ratified the agreement entered into by Mr. Specker and the Calumet Center.

Father Martin said Interstate Bakeries will continue to occupy the one-story brick structure until it can find suitable accommodations elsewhere. The bakery has occupied the building since 1958.

"As soon as possible we will have our architects inspect the building and prepare plans for remodeling the building which will be used chiefly for a library and laboratories. Some faculty offices may also be included," the Rev. Martin said.

Father Martin said the college has been interested for some time in acquiring additional facilities for the rapidly expanding college. Enrollment peaked at 897 students during the first semester of the current college year.

"Acquisition of this building means that Saint Joseph's College Calumet Center will continue as a community college and thoughts of relocating on another site are tabled," Father Martin explained.

The Calumet Center acquired its present building in 1960 when the college expanded to a four-year, degree-granting curriculum.

The Fine Arts Club would like to thank those donors who helped make their recent Hot Dog Sale a success.

Included among the donors are: Candiano's, East Chicago; IGA, East Chicago; VanTil's, Woodmar; Prairie View Dairy, East Chicago; Wiseway, Gary; Butternut Bakers, East Chicago; Joe Tittle and Sons, Gary; George's Diner, East Chicago; Peerless Potato Chip Co., Gary; and a freshman Center student, Barbara Blumka.

A scale model of the Specker building deeded to Saint Joseph's College Calumet Center, 4721 Indianapolis Boulevard, East Chicago, Ind., is presented to the Rev. Henry J. Martin, C.P.P.S., Director, by Mr. Eugene Specker (right), a former East Chicago automobile dealer now residing in Whiting, Ind. The 75x142-foot building is being designated as the Mary Specker Memorial Library in memory of the donor's wife.

Retreat to Start at 9

On the day after Ash Wednesday, Feb. 28, a one-day retreat will be held at Immaculate Conception Church, located on Olcott Street, one block from the school. This retreat, open to all St. Joseph's College Calumet Center students, is an annual one-day retreat. The program for the day is as follows:

- 9—Opening Conference
- 10:15—Conference
- 12—Low Mass
- 1:30—Conference
- 3—Conference followed by Benediction.

Private meditation and confession will be in progress between the conferences. The facilities of the Center will be available between conferences.

Fr. George Lubeley, C.P.P.S., Chaplain of the Center, announced that all Catholic, full-time day students must attend. All others are of course cordially invited to attend.

Father Jordan Aumann, O.P., who will address those attending the retreat, is well known as an author, editor, lecturer, and retreat master, is the founder of the Spiritual Institute and founding editor of the Cross and Crown Series of Spirituality.

CENTER DUELS RENSSELAER 5

In March, St. Joe's Calumet Center will challenge the champion intramural basketball team from Rensselaer. Twelve Calumet Center basketball players, coached by Mr. Ray Knight, will play. Mr. Knight was a "Little All-American" football player in 1956 and a St. Joe alumnus.

Jim Tobolski is chairman of the Student Council Athletic Committee. Jim, along with Mr. Knight, has been practicing with St. Joe's men regularly each week.

Recently the Student Council purchased shirts for the newly organized team. A $30 allotment was obtained from the Student Council for the purchase of these shirts. It is hoped that in the future the athletic program will be rapidly expanding and that eventually the remaining apparel will be purchased.

At present, no definite plans have been formulated for the Campus vs. Center contest. If the game is held on the Rensselaer Campus, the Student Council will furnish buses for the student body.

Tentative plans have been set for the second week of March, but no definite date has been set.

SOUNDING OFF!

It has been in the past and still is the policy of this paper to encourage the writing of letters to the editor and this for a very good reason: one of the functions of a newspaper is service as a medium of communication between the staff and the readers. Editorials written in this paper are done so, not only to entertain you, but to make you think. Thus far, we have not met with a great deal of success.

To date, there have been seventeen issues of "Shavings" this school year but only nine letters (and five of them were in one issue). Very poor, indeed! To me, this indicates a definite lack of student interest, a lack for which there is no excuse. I don't think it is due to any inability on the part of the students to think about something said and come to a conclusion one way or the other; I think it due more to the fact that you don't want to make time to think. It appears that if it does not affect you here and now, you are all content to nod your heads and forget about it.

There are other people who read this paper, you know, and their only contact with the school is often through the paper alone. What do they think? Think also of how you would feel if you handed in a paper and a week later the professor handed it back to you with "Yes" written in the corner. This is somewhat the way we feel when we write and draw absolutely no response.

Some of the students may not have time; I am thinking of those that work and attend nights. But I honestly feel that those of you who are here during the day and spend time sitting around talking with the boys half of the time are not so pressed for time that you cannot spend an hour a week telling us what you think about the Cuban exiles (thank you, George!).

Due to space problems and the number of letters we (would like to) receive, we can't promise to print them. But write anyway; it will be read and if it is worth printing and space allows, we shall do so.

The Dean's Office

Jerry Stano has signed up for work toward a master's degree in economics at Loyola University's night school. Father Joseph Smolar, C.P.P.S., Dean of Students, stated that Stano's scholarship is the sort we hope to continue and foster here at the Center.

Will the newly-enrolled students pick up their I.D. cards in room 105. With this card they will be able to borrow books from any library in the area, and what's more, many shows in Chicago offer special prices to college students.

Why Jobs Are Scarce!

Anyone who has gone looking for a job, whether it be full-time or part-time, knows that it is very difficult to find employment. Why is this so? First, an increase in mechanization in industry has taken place, and second, industry lacks foresight.

The first cause for the lack of jobs, an increase in the mechanization in industry, commonly referred to as automation, has produced a number of layoffs in this area. I am sure you have all seen the cartoon illustration of a gigantic machine being operated by one man. The only action the man had to perform was the pressing of a button. In the left part of the cartoon, two men are shown carrying a machine made solely for the purpose of pressing the button. The implication of the cartoon is evident: the man who presses the button loses his job. This is the point I am driving at, only on a larger scale. Machines are of value up to a certain point. Without them, we would regress to the stone age. When machines start to take the place of men in positions where a man's work is sufficient, it is time to call a halt to the mechanization process.

The second cause for the scarcity of jobs is the lack of foresight in industry. The majority of the industrial wealth of this area centers around oil, gas, and steel. Why aren't any industries concerned with space projects or the development of solar and atomic energy in this area? Nowadays, we use oil and gas to heat our homes. Within a couple of decades, we will be using atomic or solar energy for heat. Gas and oil will become obsolete. In the future, atomic and solar energy will take the place of gas and oil in our lives. The state of California has these modern industries. That state has become the most prosperous in the nation, and jobs are as plentiful as jackrabbits in Texas.

If something is not done to stimulate the industries in this area, events will take place that will hurt the working man and the company that employs him. As far as the working man is concerned, it will be harder than ever to find a job. As far as the company is concerned, it will become obsolete in the modern era of the future and will lose its customers.

If the atom bomb was developed within a few miles of this school, why can't we have more modern ideas and jobs made available in this area?

Letter to Editor

Attention Mr. Mike Berilla:

In your account of the volleyball "game" waged between the freshman girls and guys you referred to the game as a "... complete hoax ..." Indeed it was. But it was not the girls who perpetrated the hoax, as your article implied. You further stated that the ball, when hit in the direction of the girls, "... they handled the ball as if it were fragile or hot ..." That ball, Mr. Berilla, was not hit: it was aimed and fired like a cannonball being released at an enemy during a war; and woe to the luckless girl who got in the way of that flying missile, or attempted to change its course in any way.

In defense of our rotating; that is, as any true volleyball player knows, a rule of the game. The idea being that everyone would get a chance at playing every position. Also both teams' weakness would be able to be played on by the opposite team. And so if, in the future, the girls condescend to play a rematch, we would be wise to first discuss the rules of the game.

Brotherly Love

by Cheryl Marz

Life, as applicable to society in general, may be said to parallel a novel, the plot of which revolves around the actions of individuals in a given society. It is not simply the story of one hero-type character and situations involving him alone. It is rather a story which points out the fact that individual characters react upon each other in a society to create a situation.

The hero of our novel may be handsome, well-liked, and very capable of commanding respect. He may be easy to get along with and always willing to do more than his share. But without other characters to interact for the purpose of creating a situation, our hero's personality means absolutely nothing at all.

He may be an extremely jealous hero-type. He may be all he himself believes he should be and nothing at all as he should be. But without a situation created by other characters, these highly explosive personality traits lack the necessary fuse.

All of the individuals in our novel must interact to develop the plot. A situation must take place in a society of individuals and other individuals are necessary to act as human catalysts of a sort. It is all of the individuals, even those barely discernible, who succeed in bringing a situation to a climax.

In the plot of life, we ourselves are, of course, the heroes. Just as in the novel previously described, the life novel is a number of individuals interacting to create a situation. The hero does not exist entirely alone somewhere out in space. He cannot be the hero without other individuals interacting to make him a hero. He cannot exist. He must interact.

Much the same concept applies in man's relation to God. Man is a collective term in that God calls all of mankind unto Him as one. Man's interaction with man leads to his own personal salvation or damnation. It is man's interacting in society which brings about his own damnation or salvation and that of those individuals with whom he interacts.

Because of this, one's attitude toward other men in regard to God is very important. Man must love his neighbor and by the means of this very love, he must be worthy of the love of his neighbor. Man must also love God and through this love attempt to make himself worthy of God's love. This is God's own plan for salvation for us. In complete interaction, God's plan for us, we will find salvation for ourselves and those around us. We will come unto God as one by interacting individually upon each other and God.

The New Look Abroad

by Barb Sichak

Who is the American working abroad? Most people consider the American working abroad a naive, slow-thinking individual who not only is stepped on and walked over by shrewd, scheming foreigners, but who is also ignorant of his surroundings. Other people imagine our overseas workers as crooked politicians neglecting their diplomatic responsibilities to attend parties, consuming barrels of champagne and tons of caviar.

With the election of new leaders and the adoption of a foreign policy that "moves ahead with vigor" (a la' Kennedy), we find the "Ugly American" image of Americans abroad outdated and stereotyped.

According to our government, the American overseas is no longer an innocent country bumpkin who is awed by big city life, nor the free and easy Yank who lives by the philosophy of "the sky is the limit." The American working abroad is a dedicated, intelligent person who is winning much praise for his efforts and who is creating better international relations.

An estimated one million government personnel and dependents are working abroad today. Another 200,000 Americans are working or studying abroad through non-government agencies.

Today twenty-eight federal agencies employ Americans in 127 foreign countries. The bulk of these are military personnel serving on bases in such places as South Korea, Europe, Cuba, and Turkey. Other leading federal agencies employing Americans abroad include the State Department, the Agency for International Development, Peace Corps, the U.S. Information Agency, the U.S. Arms Control, and Disarmament Agency, the Treasury Department, Department of Agriculture, and the Central Intelligence Agency.

All of these agencies offer many opportunities and benefits for active, adventurous college graduates.

The federal agency attracting most college graduates is the Peace Corps. At present, the U.S. has 3,458 Corpsmen serving in underdeveloped countries. This is a clear indication that the so-called "Ugly American" isn't strictly a greedy parasite preying on the government.

The first concert will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 27, at 6 p.m. The program will include Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D major, Op. 73 and Bruch's violin concerto in G minor Op. 26. You are all invited to come in and enjoy the music. The kind of music that brings refinement of feeling and character; the kind of music that can do as much as restore health.

I would like to take this opportunity to point out that the purpose of these concerts is not to "educate" you but to give you a chance to sit back and enjoy majestic art.

In last week's issue of SHAVINGS you were all invited to attend an event that was not mentioned. As you probably detected, there was a paragraph missing. It said the following: I have made arrangements with the administration to use the downstairs lounge for one hour every week to play some of the classical works of the great masters.

THE FACULTY

Whiting-Born Teacher Lectures In Accounting

The newest member of Saint Joseph's faculty is Mr. James Paulus, who is a lifelong resident of the Calumet Area. Born in Whiting, Mr. Paulus began his education at Whiting Elementary School and Whiting High School. A college education took its roots at Indiana University, and his graduate work was completed at DePaul University, Chicago. Mr. Paulus holds two degrees in accounting, a B.S. and an M.B.A.

January 1963 brought Mr. Paulus into the St. Joe's "family circle." He is teaching advanced income tax on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Mr. Paulus and his son, James often find themselves outvoted by his wife Arlene and daughters Kathy and Lynn Ann on family outings, but even with his growing family, Mr. Paulus finds time for outside pleasures. An important outside interest of Mr. Paulus is the Lansing Sportsman Club. His hobbies, for which he makes extra time, include golf, boating, and reading. This busy schedule also includes an accountant's job at Inland Steel Company.

Mr. Paulus feels that St. Joe's will go far in the education field, and just being a small part of this structure is important to him.

Roving Reporter

This week the Roving Reporter asked students what they liked best about St. Joe's.

Larry Suter, junior: "You are treated as an individual, not a number."

Wally Deptula, junior: "The atmosphere is very casual and my fellow students very friendly and helpful."

Betty Striegel, junior: "The friendliness of the students and interest of the teachers in you as individuals."

Paul Milak, junior: "The people and the atmosphere."

Jim Kick, junior: "The relation between faculty and students. In a small school such as St. Joe's, this relationship is more personal."

ENGLISH

Discuss Cummings

The fourth meeting of the English seminar was held Wednesday evening, Feb. 13 with Mr. Raymond Krajewski as moderator. The topic discussed was "Modern Drama." It was decided to discuss the poetry of E. E. Cummings on Monday, Feb. 18 and to consider the possibilities of discussing the various types of literary criticism at a subsequent meeting or meetings.

This seminar is held weekly for the purpose of delving into aspects of literature more thoroughly than is possible in formal courses. The meetings will be held in rotation first on Monday, then Tuesday, then Wednesday, and so on. It was decided at the Feb. 13 meeting that because of the short time between Wednesday and the following Monday, the Monday meetings will be of a sort that will require less preparation than the others. Poetry readings on records or special radio plays will be listened to and then discussed.

The next meeting after this issue of SHAVINGS comes out will be on Tuesday, Feb. 26. Anyone interested may attend. The topic for discussion will be posted on the bulletin board in the front hall.

Arliss Koslewski seemed quite angered when she read her favorite phrase in SHAVINGS two weeks ago. But she has now forgiven George for his terrible deed: forgetting to bring her four library books.

Jeanette Minchuck enjoyed her trip to Holy Cross School of Nursing in South Bend, except for the fact that she wasn't permitted to enjoy her most desired wish: to see the morgue.

I hear that Bob Lanning is not only interested in go-carts, but also he is learning how to mimic his favorite personalities—Kukla, Fran, and Ollie. All his talent is attributed to his little black ink pen. Ask him to do his impersonations for you sometime.

Fred Green's favorite pastime seems to be dog-sitting. Last week he brought his dog to school—a huge, and I'm not exaggerating—Great Dane that stood as high as Mary Stokes.

Tom Dwan seems to be the target of much criticism these days concerning his financial capacities. It seems that Tom accidentally tripped Dave Geometti, causing Dave's food to go flying all over the hall the day of the Fine Arts Club's Food Sale. People are saying that Tom was the first to go grabbing in the flying food. How about it, Tom?

Commenting on his gift to Saint Joseph's College Calumet Center Mr. Specker said:

"I feel it is very necessary that every child today have the opportunity for a college education and if in this way I can do a small part to make it possible for a greater number of youngsters to acquire such an education at a rate affordable to most then it would seem to be my responsibility to do so.

"The fact that Saint Joseph's makes a college education possible at one-fourth the cost of a campus college and that this building can be adapted to use as a library in memory of my wife is significant in the future college offerings to youngsters here in East Chicago and the Calumet Region."

The Specker building has been part of the East Chicago community much longer than the St. Joseph Center. Erected in 1907, it originally was used as a roller skating rink. The building was adapted to sports arena and was the scene of many prize fights in its early years. A funeral parlor and livery stable were other businesses which housed.

Changes came to the Specker building when the horseless carriage became popular and in the early 1920s it was to begin a 30-year period as an automobile agency.

Mr. Specker leased the building in 1935 for his Studebaker automobile agency and in 1952 he acquired title to the structure. Specker closed his automobile agency in 1954 and for a time leased the building to another auto agency. Pepsi Cola Bottling Company of East Chicago occupied the building briefly during construction of its new facilities on Chicago Avenue and an Edsel dealer leased the building for a short time prior to Interstate Bakery moving in on February 1, 1958.

A native of Crown Point, Mr. Specker lived in Hammond as a youth and attended St. Joseph's School. He worked in automobile agencies as a young man and in 1925 was married to Mary Gorman who died in 1960 and for whom the college library building has been named. He resided in East Chicago from 1925 until moving to Whiting last year.

Attend "Juno And The Paycock"

Recently, members of the new Drama Club, under the direction of Mr. Denver Sasser, Instructor in English, attended the Indiana University Theatre Group's presentation of Sean O'Casey's greatest play, "Juno and the Paycock."

Another of the club's most recent activities was the reading and submission of several very successful Broadway plays to Father Henry J. Martin, C.P.P.S., Dean and Director, for his approval. The best of these will become the Drama Club's major production of this semester.

The newly elected officials of the club are Mark Biel, president, and Bob Harris, secretary-treasurer. Mark appeared as the big, gruff, scheming senator in the drama "The Curious Savage," the combined student play of last semester; whereas Bob, who has had no previous dramatic experience, is the current treasurer of the freshman class.

These two officers' backgrounds in drama closely exemplify those of the Drama Club's members: some have had previous experience while others have not; but both are similar in one respect—their goal; personal enrichment in the theatre arts through the devotion of conscientious and heart-felt efforts.

If anyone is interested in joining the club, he should register his name at the club's next meeting which will be held on Thursday, March 14 at 4:30 p.m. in room 210.

If I may, I would like to give some well-deserved credit to a few of the unsung heroes associated indirectly with the St. Joseph's family. I use the word "indirectly" in the sense that they specialize in getting to the hearts of all the St. Joe guys and gals in the best possible way—through their stomachs. These are none other than those "kitchen queens," the waitresses of George's Diner. The "kitchen queens" are led by the one and only George Charbulak ("Mr. Twister") and the queen of them all, his very charming wife, Mary.

Who are the ones who always willingly listen to the complaints of St. Joe students? When you're down and out, who will always perk you up with a friendly smile? Why it's Mrs. Farley, better known as Marge. Who's the one who serves the best bagels and cream cheese that just melt in your mouth? Why it's Pat Thomas, of course. When it comes to serving the greatest champ cheeseburgers in town, don't hesitate to ask for Mrs. Lillian Pawlowski. If it's gefülte fish that you desire, then be sure to have either Moe Butler, or the new addition to George's Diner, Ruth Rentz, wait on you. Be sure to ask for Bernice Van Auken whenever you're in need of a good, hot cup of "joe" (better known as java, or just plain coffee).

Last, but certainly not least, are the cutest dishwashers this side of Punia-land, Mrs. Bertha Sewell, Bessie Tamburo, and Mrs. Gladys Chrisulaky.

So just remember, Dear Hearts, whenever you're down and out, just take your problems to George's. The odds are two to one that you will walk out of there with a smile on your face.

Thanks,
Ed Stazinski

ART The Dispatch of The Messenger

by Roberta Gabrys

A shepherd and several of his flock, an attentive pigeon, stately ruins, all surrounded by the beauty of the English countryside—this is Boucher's "The Dispatch of the Messenger."

Trees in full bloom, water racing through the crags in the rocks are awaiting the dismissal of the tiny messenger. The young shepherd, tying a note to the neck of a pigeon, is reminiscent of the days of old when wars and loves were won or lost by the arrival of this faithful little messenger.

In the words of Canaday, "The Dispatch of the Messenger" is an enchanting valentine; it is certainly not a philosophical document on the natural nobility of shepherds or the new social consciousness. Boucher's "rustic" scenes are conceived in the same spirit that led Marie Antoinette to build her famous "mill" and to play shepherdess or milkmaid at parties whose cost would have supported a genuine shepherdess or milkmaid for life.

The Sports Beat

by Art Hixon

From the South comes this startling innovation in the Southeastern Conference athletic program. The twelve conference schools have voted to allow the female species to participate in all intercollegiate sports activities. A spokesman for the SEC Tennis Coaches Association, of which he is currently president, as well as tennis coach at the University of Alabama, Jason Morton has recently announced that the new feminine touch will probably be supplied by 19-year-old sophomore Roberta Alison, who will be a member of the 'Bama varsity tennis team this season.

Thus far, it is quite certain that the ladies will limit their talents to the less physical events, such as tennis, swimming and golf. But, there was no mention of any restrictions prohibiting them from taking part in the contact sports of football, baseball and basketball. Can you imagine the number of male candidates trying to make the squad, especially in those events calling for contact. Ah, isn't athletics getting interesting.

Little George Post, junior guard for Saint Joseph's Pumas basketball team. This time the spunky, hot-shot scored 42 points, only five shy of the league record set by Ed Smallwood of Evansville three years ago, as SJ smothered Ball State in an ICC clash.

His running mate at guard, Russ Marcinek canned 24 the same

Guess Who!

If you live in Lansing, you may have seen him delivering mail. But, look close at this picture because he does not have his hat on now. Or, possibly you saw him around Mendel High School, from which he graduated in '59. This Student Council member has the distinction of being in our first graduating class.

night. And when it comes to selecting All-Conference stars, this writer wouldn't be surprised to see the Reusselaer school sweep the backcourt honors.

As of this writing, it seems that any one of the top ten Indiana high school basketball clubs has a real good chance to win the state tournament. Of course, there are a few unrated small schools who could cause trouble.

If we were to pick a champion now, South Bend Central, Muncie Central, Evansville Rex Mundi and Michigan City would be the logical choice. But, some think that Columbus, the only unbeaten major school, Loogootee, Eminence, Washington and Metone are excellent dark-horses. However, when the chips are down and the pressure mounts, anything can happen and usually does.

The use of the fiber glass pole by today's pole vaulters has made a farce out of the event. When the bamboo and aluminum pole was used it was the participant, not the pole that made the jump possible; but now, the pole acts like a sling-shot and catapults the user over the bar with ridiculous ease.

Council Corner

by Sarah Regan

Have you ever talked about a course that you would like to see offered here at the Center? Or have you ever found reason to complain about a course presently being offered? If you have, you may be interested in meeting the Student Council Scholastic Committee which has been quite active this semester. The members of this committee include Ted Mason, chairman; Mary Lou Patterson, senior representative; Madeleine Frechette, junior representative; Jim Paskwietz, sophomore representative; Pat Sampias, freshman representative; and Idajean Windell, part-time and night school representative. These are the students who will listen to your ideas about courses, and who may help you solve a scholastic problem. Presenting your scholastic views to the Administration is the job of this committee. Grievances and course arrangements can also be handled through this committee. Let any member of the scholastic committee know your suggestions concerning courses, especially courses in your major field, for they can serve as your direct communication line to the Administration.

The nursing representatives, Carol Klassen and Sharon Hightower, submitted a letter to Edward Latek, president of Student Council, in which they petitioned to have their voting privilege restored. This letter was read to members of the Council at the meeting of February 18. After considerable discussion, it was approved by a majority vote that the nurses have their vote restored. The nurses now have two representatives and one vote on Council. New business also included the presentation of the
